Not illustrated. 1882 Excerpt: .the sight, Hendrik Bandicard buys three tickets, the veils are withdrawn, and the Elevation and Descent from the Cross - burst upon the dazzled sight of our two friends. What a moment it is! Peter and Paul stand together, crushing each other's hands, breathing hard, flushing and paling, and flushing again with the intense emotion of artists born, seeing a great picture for the first time. It is on the Descent from the Cross, in which Rubens's splendid genius reached its highest point, that the young eyes fasten themselves most intently. Round this picture their dreams have centred from early childhood; they seem to have known every line by heart; and yet the old vision shines here in new glory, transfigured by the direct touch of genius. The intensely pathetic and natural droop of the Sacred Dead; the deep sorrow and loving tenderness shown/in the faces...
