Reviews

This pdf might be well worth a study, and a lot better than other. It really is simplistic but excitement inside the fifty percent in the book. Its been printed in an exceedingly straightforward way which is just after i finished reading this ebook through which really modified me, modify the way i believe.

The positive terminal of the arc can be made sufficiently large and of such material as not to consume at all, and the trimming of the lamp thus reduced to the replacing of one electrode only--the negative. The negative electrode also can be made so large as to remain fairly cold, and therefore consumes only at the very slow rate required to supply the arc vapor, but does not consume by combustion or heat evaporation. Thus its rate of consumption can be reduced to 1 mm. or less per hour (while the open carbon arc of old consumes about 5 cm. of electrodes per hour), and thereby even with a moderate size of electrode a life of electrodes of 100 to 300 hr. or even much more secured. This method of feeding thus lends itself very well to long-burning arcs, as they are almost exclusively used for American street lighting. By electro-conduction higher efficiencies can be reached than by heat evaporation, as the arc vapor stream when produced by electro-conduction can be made to consist entirely of the vapor of the luminescent material, as when using metallic titanium as negative terminal. A disadvantage of the method of feeding the arc by electroconduction is the much greater limitation in the choice of materials: the material must be an electric conductor, which is stable in the air, and reasonably incombustible. In the method of feeding by heat evaporation any material can be used, as it is...
