The interests of the individual are bound up in the interests of the nation to which he belongs. All who are nearest and dearest to him are profoundly affected by the prosperity of the community in which they live; for to some extent its wealth, art and justice are a common possession. In the promotion of the collective welfare, the individual finds the loftiest object of his labour and the appointed means of realizing the grandest potentialities of his nature. The state is the father; the citizens, the children. Thus the subject of this epistle is of general and permanent interest. 2. Geology, Biology and History all witness that life is dominated by the principle of evolution. The lowest forms of life existed first and these by natural selection have slowly evolved man. Every organic being is endowed with the power to increase, and this at so high a rate that, if not destroyed, the earth would soon become covered by the progeny of a single pair....
