General Accounting Office, 1996. OCLC Number: (OCoLC)37419122 Subject: Privatization -- United States. Excerpt: . . . B-272509 Continuing a GOCO Facility at GOCO The cost-effectiveness of the Armys plan to continue a facility at the Letterkenny for the Paladin Letterkenny depot to support the Paladin self-propelled artillery vehicle Self-Propelled Artillery Vehicle until the year 2001 is questionable - particularly given that the capacity Is Questionable and capability to perform the work at the Anniston depot currently exist. Also, continuing work at the Letterkenny depot would require continued funding of fixed overhead costs at that facility. The Letterkenny depot has an ongoing partnership arrangement with private industry to upgrade and modernize the Paladin. Government employees overhaul and refurbish M109 chassis and private-sector employees fabricate and install new gun mounts and turrets. System integration is accomplished by employees from both sectors. The current upgrade program is scheduled to be completed in fiscal year 1999. However, the Army tentatively plans to terminate government employee participation in the program in fiscal year 1997 by changing to 100 percent 7 An contractor employee support for the final 2 years of the program. Army Materiel Command official informed us that the Army leadership met informally and determined that transferring capability for future Paladin maintenance requirements to the private sector using employees from the realigning Letterkenny depot would be less risky and costly than DOD depot. A formal risk assessment of establishing capability at another this workload transfer to the private sector has not been documented as required by DOD policy before privatizing core workloads. Anniston Army depot officials stated that this depot already has repair...
