Not illustrated. 1901-01-01 Excerpt: .the present writing the tunnel itself has been constructed, the ends of the long section at the corners being left open for the insertion of the pipe. These openings will be bricked up later. The cost of the tunnel, including excavation, brick work, cement work, drain tile, iron columns, wooden brick and back filling was $3,300.00, approximately $7.00 per foot. The installing of the pipe, including steam, return, compressed air, and vacuum pipes and the hangers therefor and including the lighting of the tunnel itself is now in progress and will cost $i,300.00, or about $3.90 per foot complete. The total cost therefore for the whole construction will probably be about $11.00 per foot, in comparing the cost of this construction with others frequently used it will be noticed that the same is quite high, but on the other hand it is expected that the construction, at least of this tunnel part, will last for all time and it is reasonable to assume that on account of the accessibility of all of the pipe and electric circuits that the same will be kept in better condition than they would if hopelessly buried under the ground and that on account of these features the running expenses due to the radiation of heat occasioned by the deterioration of the insulation will be reduced to the very lowest figure. Another advantage is in the use of the tunnel for electric light and power circuits. This exists in the fact...
