Excerpt: . . . 11 The company is almost ten years old, making us sort of the old man of the industry we are talking about today. These problems take a long time in terms of the biology necessary to create plant life that can provide a remarkably different energy source than the ones you are seeing today. So while the other members around the table use machines to produce it, we use plants to produce what they need to put into their machines. So I will talk briefly about us and then we basically serve as a footprint for what the industry will likely look like over the next couple of years. So the company works both on biodiesel and on ethanol, both in next generation or generation and a half. So the biodiesel crop we use is a crop similar to canola. It is called camelina. It is a mustard seed. We chose it because it has very, very good energy qualities. It is not a great food oil, but it grows in marginal lands, so in eastern Washington, Oregon, Montana, the Dakotas. The work we have done on it non-transgenically has allowed really substantial yield increases through some very clever technologies that we have de-veloped using marker-assisted breeding and some science words I wont bore you with today. But the net result is we think we are achieving a cost per gallon savings of about 50 percent over soybeans. It...
